SCHOOL BOOKS.—A full amortim

Beletted Loetry.

When Lord Lindsey was travelling in Egypt. he found a mummy, the inscription on which showed that it was two thousand years old.— Unwrapping it, he discovered in one of its hands a tiny root. He brought the root to England, and planted it, when lo! it bloomed, and pro duced a lovely flower.

The following beautiful stanzas, by Mrs. S. H.

Bradford, were suggested by this interesting in-

Two thousand years ago, a flower Bloomed lightly in a far-off land; Two thousand years ago, its seed was placed within a dead man's hand. Before the Savior came to earth, That man had lived, and loved, and died, And even in that far off time, The flower had spread its perfume wide.

Suns rose and set, years came and went, The dead had kept its treasure well; Nations were born and turned to dust, While life was hidden in that shell. The shrivelied hand is robbed at last, The seed is buried in the earth; When lo! the life long hidden there— Into a glorious flower burst forth. Just such a plant as that which grow From such a seed when buried low; Just such a flower in Egypt bloomed And died hee thousand years ago.

And will not He who watched the seed, And kept the life within the shell, When those He loved are laid to rest. Watch o'er their buried dust as well? And will He not from 'neath the sod Cause something glorious to arise?

Aye, though it sleep two thousand years,
Yet all that buried dust shall rise. Just such a face as greets you now, Just such a form as here we wear, Only moreglorious far, will rise To meet the Savior in the air.

Then will I lay me down in peace.
When called to leave this vale of tears,
For "in my flesh shall I see God,"
Even though I sieep face thousand years.

HE, SHE, OR IT. A Correct Account of the Mysterious Female Man.

Truth Stanger Than Fiction.

rom the Broadhead (Wis.) Independent, Feb. 1 About the year 1855 there moved to this village a family by the name of Burnham, consisting of Dr. M. L. Burn-ham, his wife, and two children, a daughter aged sixteen, and a son three or four years younger. Dr. Burnham was a man of some property, and of the highest respectability. The family soon became active members of our village society, the doctor being an active mem-ber and one of the deacons of the Con-gregational Church. Dr. Burnhma was a well-read physician, and did some practice in addition to keeping a drug store, in which his daughter, Ellen, assisted him as a clerk for the first two years of the doctor's residence here. Miss Ellen Burnham was by no means a beautiful girl. Her hair and eyes were dark; leatures regular, but rather course and domestic duties, was devoted to instru-mental music and to horse-back-riding, complished. Her life for the four year sub sequent to 1856 was not unlike that of other y ung ladies of the place. She had a large class, mostly of young girls, whom she instructed in instrumental music. In the fall of 1858 a young man by the name of Powell came here and was employed as principal of the village school. Powell resigned the leadership of the school in the spring of 1859, and started the Reporter, the first paper published in our village. During the sum-mer he became intimate with the family of Dr. Burnham, and became engag-ed to Miss Burnham in the fall of 1859. The engagement soon became known outside of the family. The only surprise excited on account of it was surprise at the taste of Mr. Powell in selecting a girl of such masculine appearance. Mississipping and the surprise at the taste of Mr. Powell in selecting a girl of such masculine appearance. Mississipping and the surprise a Burnham's parents seemed particularly pleased at the prospective marriage of their daughter, whom they believed well qualified to make a good wife for an edi-tor. In February 1860, L. W. Powell and Miss Ellen Burnham were married by Rev. Mr. Ccochran, the Congregational minister.

The happy couple took a short bridal tour, preparatory so settling down for life. After an absence of a week, they returned to the residence of the bride's marriage, sent out invitations to large numbers of our citizens to welcome the bride and groom. We were present at this wedding party, and could not but think that both the bride and groom appeared remarkably solmn. We did not kiss the bride, although that was the fashion. Our objection to the kiss ing part of the programme was a dislike to come in contact with an unusually heavy and black moustache which marred the upper lip of the bride.

Mrs. Powell became more and more masculine in her appearance as she grew older. She took a case in the Reporter office, and learned the printer's trade rapidly. And in a short time she proved to be the best jour, in the office. She also took to smoking, in the cultivation of which habit she proved herself a printor.

In the spring of 1861, when Powell had been married about a year and a half, the 7th Wisconsin regiment was organized. Powell's wife not having presented him with an helr to make home goubly pleasant, he resolved to go to the wars, he sought, and, through the influence of friends, obtained the appointment of State agent or "wet nurse" for the gallant 7th, then ordered to Washington. Mrs. Powell, being of a tough and hardy make resolved to accompany her husband to the front. No objections being raised, she fitted herself out and went to Washington.

she fitted herself out and went to Washington.

The regiment was for a time detained at Washington, and Mrs. Powell made herself happy by working up the moral town. A few weeks after her arrival there, while she was riding on horse-back one day, her masculine appearance attracted the attention of a Government detective, who made up his mind that Mrs. Powell was a man and a rebei spy. The detective followed her about the city and to her quarters. He dogged her steps for several days, until, just before the regiment was ordered off, Mrs. Powell took it into her head to return to Broadhead. She packed her rig, took her leave of her husband and the regiment, and started for home. The detective accompated her to Chicago on the same train, and at the Briggs House, where the lady booked her name, he placed her under arrest as a rebel in disguise. In vain she claimed to be a woman and the wife of a member of the 7th Regiment. She called in the landlady, who asserted that she had seen Mrs.

Powell at the house before. Mrs. Powell finally got the detective to telegraph to Gov. Randall, of this State, and to berhusband at Washington. Gov. Randall telegraphed back that there was such a lady.

band it Washington. Gov. Randall telegraphed back that there was such a lady. A similar telegram arrive from Washington. In a few days ar. Powell reached Chicago, and the unhappy couple made their way home to this village.

Language cannot describe the feelings of this unhappy pair. Hardly over the first flush of connubial felicity, and the wife had become an object of suspicion to strangers, and was in constant danger of being arrested as a man. They remained here a few days,, when Mrs. Powell informed her parents that she was going to visit some relations East. The fond parents, little dreaming of the arrest and subsequent scene at the Briggs House, urged her to remain and replenish her wardrobe. She, answered that she could procure more becoming and stylish garments at the East. After her departure, Mr. Powell procured some cloth, and went to Mr. Movers are for the subsequent of the could procure more becoming and stylish garments at the East. After her departure, Mr. Powell procured some cloth, and went to Mr. Movers are for the subsequent of the could procure of the could procure more becoming and stylish garments at the East. After her departure, Mr. Powell procured some cloth, and went to Mr. Movers are for the could procure of the could proc departure, Mr. Powell procured some cloth, and went to Mr. Moony, one of our tailors, and informed him that he wished to present his brother with asuit of clothes. He informed the tailor that his garments fitted his brother, and a suit made to fit himself would be just the thing. The clothes were made and expressed to Chicago. Soon after, Mr. Powell informed Dr. Burnham, the Powell informed Dr. Burnham, the father of his wife, that Ellen had changed her dress, and was now wearing men's attire, and living in Chicago. The Doctor was thunderstruck, and the mother half crazy. The only satisfaction they could get out of Powell was that his wife was not a woman, and would not dress as a woman any longer. The Doctor requested Powell to accompany him, and immediately went to Chicago, where he found his daughter dressed in a suit of clothes Mr. Powell had had made for his brother. Mrs. Powell informed him 'that he was fiet a woman, and would no longer try to a woman, and would no longer try to act the part of one. The Doctorinsisted upon an examination.

At length, to satisfy her father, she consented that the late Dr. Brainard should examine her. Dr. Brainard did so,

Chicago had few better-looking young men than the former Mrs. Powell. He was a portion of this time organist of the Plymouth Church, Rev. J. R. Sheiherd, pastor, and for a time organist of one of the Baptist Churches. We were par-ticularly amused at his hearty admira-tion of the girls. He would leave his piano ar work any time to look at a In 1863, John Burnham returned to

Broadhead, and went into the drug business with his father. He was at this time engaged to the State street lady. who was entirely ignorant of the story of her lover's life. We have it from the best authority—a young lady who resided in the family of the young lady—that Burnham was a deveted lover, and, even after he removed to Broadhead, corresponded regularly twice a week with his betrothed, and paid her visits of two and three days' duration. After and children flocked to the drugstore of Burnham & Son to trade, for the sake of seeing the young man who was once a wife. At length Dr. Burnham sold out his property here in 1864, and removed to Waterloo, Iowa, taking Edgar with him, and there opened a drug store. Soon after the removal of the family to Waterloo, Edgar sought and obtained in Waterlee, Fdgar sought and obtained in marriage the hand of Miss Gerta Ever-

They have been married about three years, and living at Waterloo. They have no children as yet, all stories to the contrary notwithstanding. Should they ever have children, or either of them we shall make their them, we shall make haste to inform It is simply ridiculous to suppose that Edgar Burnham was ever a mother, and quite as Insane to believe that he can be a father.

From the best of authority, namely, from the best of authority, namely, from Mr. Powell and from the surgeon who examined him, we know that Edgar Burnham is an It, and will never be any thing else. It is due to the young lady to whom he was engaged in Chicago to say that she never knew the make go to say that she never knew the make up of her lover from first to last, and that the engagement was broken off by her before his history became known.

Miss Everette, his present wife knew the facts of this remarkable case, substantially as we have related them, and married It willingly of her own accord, and against the wishes of her parents. She undoubtedly knows the facts more definately now than we do and ean definately now than we do, and can comfort herself accordingly. We wish her joy of her union with an It, if there paper soon after begining to learn the printing business, went to court a preacher's daughter. The next time he attended meeting he was taken down at hearing the minister announce as his text: "My daughter is grievously tormented with a "devil."

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT-"Angels, in the grave, will not question thee as to the amount of wealth thou hast left behind thee, but as to what deeds thou hast done in the world to entitle thee to a sext among the blest."

BUSINESS SUCCESS.

stones to success already enumerated.

PERSISTENT HARD WORK.—Men who use only their muscles imagine that men who depend upon their brains are strangers to hard work. Never was there a greater mistake. Every successful merchant does more real hard work in the first ten years of his business career than any farmer or blacksmith ever dreamed any farmer or blacksmith ever dreamed to work early if you say your prayers when you come any farmer or blacksmith ever dreamed of. Make up your mind to work early would find it vastly easier to lie down and fail.

INTEGRITY.—Those who have read our article on "Commercial Holor," published some weeks since, will know what we mean by this. Whether it be the result of business policy, or Christian principle, or both, it is that quality that makes a man do exactly as he agrees, even in the smallest things. A well known business man of this city, when in college years ago, was so poor that he had to borrow money to take a letter out of the post office. (Letters in those days were not prepaid, and one from a distance cost

In the mercantile life ninety-five out of every hundred fail. In other pursuits success is not easily won. It comes not for being apostrophised, or sentimentally yearned after. No conjurer's wand evokes it, no tales of the Arabian Nights chronicle it. It is a hard fact gained inch by inch, after a toilsome ascent so gradual that when a man has fully gained it he seeds the acclaim of his neighbors to make him sure of the fact. The sooner, then, you can rid yourself of the day dream, so common to young men, that you are suddenly to become rich by some stroke of luck, and settle down to the conviction that success in business can only be won by persistent, hardwork, integrity, economy, pluck and prudence, the sooner you are prepared to begin the work of laying the foundation for a solid structure. Until that conviction is gained you are frittering away the best years

After much solicitation, Ellen permitted her father to examine her and satisfy himself that she was not a woman. Dr. Burnham then precured a situation for her, under the name of Edgar Burnham, in a wholesale drug house of J. H. Reed & Co., in whose employ he remained about one year. Dusing this time he roomed and slept with a young man by the name of Andrews, now doing business in Crosby's Opera House block. He also became engaged to a young iady one State street, the daughter of his landlady.

The habit of saving must be formed before any increase of salary can do you any good. If you cannot live within your meanf on a small salary, a large one will only prove a curse to you. You think, perhaps, if you do not dine at the Malson Dorse, if you refrain from eigars, bill-Doree, if you refrain from eigars, billiards, theaters, and operas, you are a pattern of economy. You are far from it. You may be a spend-thrift without any of these. If your income is small, true economy will lop off many things that seem necessaries. As a nation we spend too much money. It is time for twenty years ago. Then two men that we now have in mind, rich and successful, began as errand boys at $2.50 a week ticeship, barely brought their wages up to $7 a week. A millionaire of Chicago, and not long since the great dry goods merchant of Lake street, began by loanjust such a pittance as this. At that time white beaver hats were in vogue among gentlemen. He and his brother managed to make one such hat do for vegetables at low prices in those days, and cooked them in their room to suit their taste, and lived well. How much do you think it cost them? Just thirty-Think of that, you young men who feel that you have cheated your epigastrium if you dine once or twice on that sum!—
"No young man of spirit would pinch himself in that way," you exclaim, "it's unmanly." Not a bit of it. It is usmanly to live beyond your means. If bare floors and the simplest necessities are all your means will allow, to accept the situation theerfully is evidence of the highest type of manliness, and to do otherwise is to be either a beggar or a scoundrel. The Absurdity of Drinking.

An article in All the Year Round says.

Until that conviction is gained you are frittering away the best years of your life and contracting habits that will counteract the best efforts of after years. You are more apt to be struck by lightning than by any luck that will be ofpermanent benefit to you. If you have forever parted company with the hope of becoming suddenly rich—the ignis fatuus that has led many a gifted man to ruin you are prepared to consider the stepping stones to success already enumerated.

Newspaper Advertisements. As a general rule advertisements are well written, striking and characteristic, but sometimes they are worded with an utter disregard to syntax, and sometimes the punctuation renders them a trifle obscure, as witness the following:
